

A Clean Limerick

(considered an oxymoron in some circles)

By William True

Our creative writing professor,
Took our offerings that often were lesser;
And o'er them we'd pore, finding imports galore,
To what end? I was sometimes a guesser.